BIG PUGS ARE STILL TALKING

Jack Johnson and Sam Langford were still as far from matched when the last fight left Fresno, as they were a month ago. Johnson wants to see the color of Langford's money before he will talk business and that is where the matter rests now. Johnson looked his stand by insisting that it was the challenger's duty to put up the stake and his, as defender, to cover it. He said he would hand the $10,000 over to a stake holder on the spot and would give Langford 24 hours to get up his $20,000, with the agreement that if he (Johnson) did not make up the remaining $10,000 the $10,000 would go to Langford. Johnson has declared his willingness to accept the challenge of a $20,000 purse for a championship battle with Sam Langford in London.

ALWAYS ABLE TO COME BACK

NO TRUTH IN STORY TO THE TROPICAL ISLAND MADE BY JOHN F. GILGODA.

If it were possible to believe Joe Gilgoda, a Porto Rican whose last trip to Hawaii would seem to be "on the spot," and would be inclined to name him as the most prominent and successful alien in the Islands, 410 or 420 years has been hardly used by even his best friends. Three weeks ago he temporarily arrived from the port, where he had dwelt for six months, and today he again took up his residence there. This time he will remain for a twelve-month.

When put on the reef Joe frequents the habitate of the submerged world in twined. He claimed to have many friends in that locality, and if that be true he might well pray to be delivered from his friends. Saturday evening Joe passed the door of one of his friends and then stopped, having sighted a bottle of whiskey on the table, almost within arm's length of the door. Joe was thirsty and his curiosity was aroused at the sight of the bottle. It was an easy matter to purchase the whiskey, but to obtain his purpose undisturbed was another problem, as Joe found out to his regret. In an adjoining room, sat a woman and another Porto Rican. By what must be considered another example of the Joe's aim of convenience both the woman and her friend were assailed with a desire to assuage their thirst at the psychological moment and entered the outer room in time to see Joe vanishing out the doorway with the coveted bottle tightly grasped. Pursuit followed but Joe was fleet of foot, and knew the devious ways of the neighborhood. He escaped with the bottle and, it is also said, with a dollar which lay alongside the bottle. His liberty was short-lived. He was too notorious a character to remain long out of sight and the inevitable arrest followed.

Joe conducted his own case in the police court and cross-examined the witnesses with a skill gained doubtless by his familiarity with the court, a familiarity which he had learnt in the hard school of experience.

The evidence taken, Joe addressed the court in his own behalf.

"Let's have this matter straightened out," he said to Judge Frank Andrade. "One of the witnesses said I took the dollar; another said I didn't. I am not satisfied to have sentence passed upon me yet, because I'm not guilty."

"If you are addressing the court," reminded the judge, "I think Mr. Brown has the privilege of opening."

"I'm not guilty," he averred. "There are a lot of people go into these houses and because I don't mingle with this class of people they have a grudge against me. If I was drunk perhaps I would have stole the whiskey, but I wasn't and I had money. Besides I can get whiskey at 75 cents a bottle; I don't have to pay $2."

Judge Andrade—"Black and White whiskey? Scotch?"

Joe—"I don't know the brand."

Joe admitted previous convictions. On the evidence in previous cases he was guilty he supposed, but the evidence was false.

Attorney Brown—"I have never known him to admit anything in this court; he always has some story to tell, but he is invariably convicted."

Judge Andrade did not deviate from the usual course and Joe, on hearing himself sentenced to a year's imprisonment, walked to the dock shaking his head negatively.

RULING TO AID THE POOR TO GET LAND

GOVERNOR FREARS ANSWER TO LETTER WRITTEN YESTERDAY BY A. L. C. ATKINSON

Governor Frears this morning sent the following reply to a letter from Chairman A. L. C. Atkinson, of the Republican Central Committee, in which Atkinson asked that application for public lands be relieved of the necessity of showing that they owe no taxes.

"Executive Chamber, Honolulu, Hawaii, October 2, 1914.

Sir:—Replying to your letter of this date, I regret to be obliged to state that the clause in the affidavit and application form for homesteads relating to delinquency in payment of taxes is not a mere matter of regulation, but is required in order to comply with statutory provisions which are beyond the executive control. I call your attention particularly to section 289 of the Revised Laws, which makes delinquency in the payment of taxes a disqualification for applying for a homestead lease, and section 216 which contains a similar provision with reference to right of purchase leases and cash free hold agreements. See also section 247. The only form of homesteading which does not require this is that under special homestead agreements, namely under section 276. The government, of course, would not insist on non delinquency in payment of taxes in that case, and if a person applies for that form of homestead lease he may leave the provision in regard to tax delinquency blank. Only one form of application and affidavit is made out to apply to all cases so as to avoid confusion.

"Very truly yours,"

"W. P. FREARS, Governor."

"The governor has gone as far as the law allows him, in removing the burden," said Atkinson. "It is certainly not fair in many cases to compel applicants for land to show that they owe no taxes. Often poor people depend for their incomes on growing crops and may not have the ready money to pay their taxes up, when lands which they want happen to be opening. It is unfair to say that in such cases they shall not have the right to apply for the lands at all."

Section 276, which is the one regarding which the governor has ruled that the rule of paying all taxes does not apply, deals with auctioning of public lands for cash.

NEW DRAMA ABOUT HAWAII

RESULT OF A VISIT HERE BY NOTED AMERICAN PLAY WRITER LAST SPRING.

NEW YORK, September 23.—Eleanor Gates can now enjoy the honor of being a successful playwright, as well as her husband, Dick Tully, author of "The Rose of the Rancho." Her first attempt, "Justice of Glendon" is a vaudeville playlet. It had its initial production at Elizabeth, New Jersey, last night.

The writing of the piece followed a suggestion made by Edwin Holt, the comedian, to Tully. The actor wanted a certain short story dramatized. He did not remember the author, and sketched out the plot for Tully. It proved to be one of Eleanor Gates' short stories. The sketch will be produced in New York in three weeks.

Holt toured last season in the Ade sketch, "The Mayor and the Manicure." He made a decided hit as the father of the freshman in "The College Widow." He staged the playlet of Eleanor Gates.

Richard Walton Tully and his wife, whose literary works are published under her maiden name of May Eleanor Gates, spent some weeks in Hawaii last spring, gathering material for a new play which is to be largely Hawaiian. They made a special study of Hawaiians, and the result, it is said will soon be seen in a drama to be produced in New York. Primitive Hawaii will have a large part in it. Tully and his wife spent a lot of time among the Hawaiians in Puna and Kona, and he went away from here with a head full of tales, legends and other "local color."
